New unit focuses on trucks

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

You may have seen it around town:

Police Chief Dan Drummond and the West Sacramento Police Department have a new arrow in their quiver, in the form of a "commercial safety enforcement" truck. Officer Matt Luiz has been trained in commercial traffic enforcement. Specifically, that means keeping an eye on the many commercial trucks on city roadways.

"We just started the program around March or April," Luiz told the News-Ledger. "I'm the commercial officer who drives the truck. I went to a two-week training school because there's a lot of different stuff involved. With cars, it's the California vehicle code we're concerned with. With commercial vehicles, it still involves the vehicle code, but it also involves federal regulations."

Luiz's job is to make sure trucks in West Sacramento are sticking to the truck routes – not using residential streets, for example. He also looks for mechanical violations, makes sure drivers' logbooks are in order ("driver fatigue is a big problem when they drive too many hours"), and tries to keep trucking companies from using public streets as truckyards.

"You can't leave a trailer unattended on a street," said Luiz. "If you do that and it's loaded, then over time, the (support legs) will sink into the asphalt – especially on a hot day."

"The main thing I noticed right out of the gate is trucks being where they're not supposed to be," Luiz commented. "They're over the allowed length on the street, and they're damaging a lot of city property, including streetlights, poles and streets. Truckers also take their tractors home at night and park them – and that's a truck route violation."

The News-Ledger caught up with Luiz on a north-area roadway across the street from a West Sacramento freight company. Luiz was eying a parked tractor-trailer combination. The tractor was backed up to the trailer so it looked vaguely like the two were connected, and thus legally parked. But the trailer wasn't engaged on the truck's fifth-wheel unit. And the trailer's supports were down, resting on the asphalt. A concerned employee from the freight company jogged out and quickly promised Luiz he would have the rig moved back to the truckyard.

How do local truckers react to the new city enforcement?

"I'm not really getting a response from the truckers," said Luiz. "They're used to it – the C.H.P. units have been doing it for years. The department did get a response from the California Trucking Association which is based in West Sacramento. They were positive. They wrote a letter to the chief saying they supported having a commercial unit in the city."

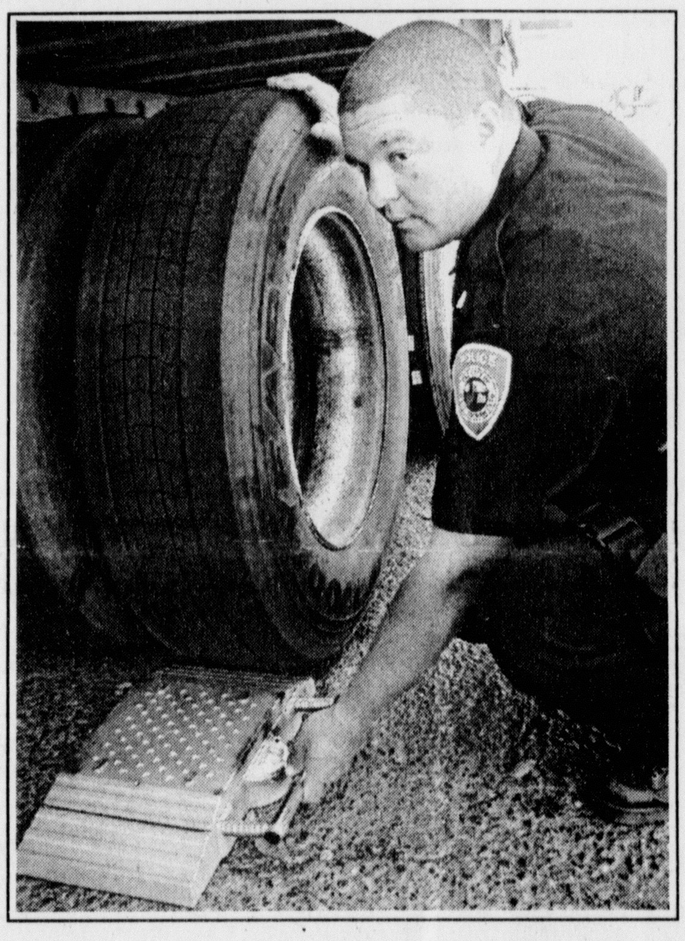
Luiz drives a police pickup truck with a camper shell that looks similar to what the C.H.P. uses for commercial enforcement. In the W.S.P.D. unit are a set of portable scales, so Luiz can weigh a tractor-trailer combination one axle at a time and make sure it is not overloaded. He also carries a sliding mechanic's "creeper" that allows him to slip underneath a parked rig for a closer look. Other equipment includes a slide-out work table for filling out inspection forms and other paperwork, right out of the side of the camper shell.

The truck now used as the city commercial unit was already in the department's parking lot. It has just been refitted.

"It's a Ford F250," Luiz reported. "We did not buy an additional truck for this division, it was just one of our extra vehicles that had towed the police boat around sometimes. I put on a camper shell."

Luiz said citizens with specific concerns about local truckers and companies may call him at 617-4934.

"I'm very interested in hearing from the public," he said.



ABOVE: You can't get a whole truck onto a set of these portable scales, but you can weigh the truck one axle (or set of axles) at a time, explains W.S.P.D. Officer Matt Luiz. The truck driver just needs to pull the vehicle onto the scales.

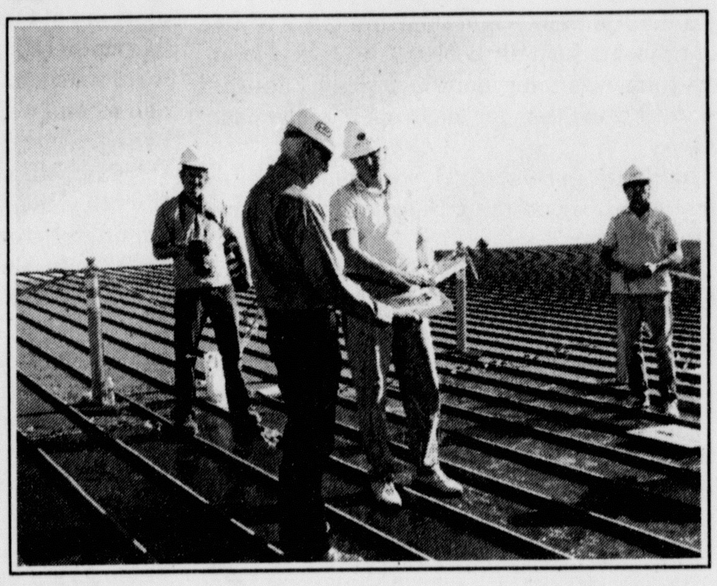
Yolo expects solar array to pay for itself



New sun-power roof at county's new health services building is part of a number of 'green' construction methods, reports Yolo County staff

From the County of Yolo

Finishing touches are now being put on Yolo County's newest facility – the Herbert Bauer, M.D., Health and Alcohol, Drug & Mental Health Services building – including the largest uni-solar application on a standing seam metal roof on the west coast. The 165KW solar cells project, installed by 1-Star Energy, is funded by a $442,560 California Energy Commission grant coordinated by Pacific Gas & Electric (Yolo County was among the first of 150 applicants to receive such a grant) and a grant from tobacco securitized funds.

The new building, to be opened later this fall, will replace current spaces used by the departments of Health and Alcohol Drug & Mental Health Services. Their current facilities annually see $180,000 in energy consumption. It is projected that the new Health and Alcohol, Drug & Mental Health building will realize an annual utility cost of $158,000 and will produce $65,000 in energy at 2006 prices. Closing all the currently used spaces

Rail crossings: quiet now the rule

From Art Schroeder
City of West Sacramento

Railroad crossings in the vicinity of Jefferson Boulevard/15th Street and the Jefferson/Stone boulevards have become relatively noise-free. In accordance with city's first Quiet Zone, train horns were silenced in these areas, effective August 25. Last year, the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) implemented the Final Train Horn Rule on the maximum horn decibel limits, switching the horn sounding requirements from distance-based to time-based, and providing local communities the opportunity to establish "quiet zones."

West Sacramento initiated the long process to create quiet zones at multiple locations throughout the city. Facing technical issues and right-of-way ownership obstacles at most of the proposed sites, the city succeeded in establishing QZ-1, which includes the 15th Street and the Jefferson/Stone crossings. Other sites may be formed into new quiet zones once they meet the specifications required.

To warn motorists, bicyclists and pedestrians, the crossings within a quiet zone are equipped with lights, bells, and crossing gates. At both the 15th Street and Jefferson/Stone railroad rossings, train horns will no longer routinely be sounded to signal an approaching train. However, the engineer has the discretion to apply the horn as a warning in case of an emergency.

So, heads up! Keep your eyes and ears open! When you're on the road, you need to be extra aware and alert at all railroad crossings at all times. Remember these important safety tips:

- Flashing red lights mean "stop";
- Never attempt to race a train—if it's a tie, you will lose;
- Never pass around a lowered crossing gate; and
- Obey crossing signs and signals.

Questions about "railroad quiet zones" can be directed to city Engineering Assistant Peter Hansen at 617-4645.

Yolo's hospitals lauded for breastfeeding work

From Cheryl Boney
Yolo Co. Dept. of Public Health

It has long been known that breastfeeding babies can prevent disease later in life. It plays a major role in preventing childhood overweight. Hospitals can help make a difference in whether mothers breastfeed their babies.

In a recent study by the California WIC Association and the University of California Davis, Yolo County ranked number 17 in the state for highest exclusive breastfeeding rates. Exclusive breastfeeding means the infant receives only breast milk, and no other food or fluids. Compared to California, 65% of new mothers in Yolo County reported higher rates of exclusive breastfeeding when they left the hospital compared to only 40% statewide.

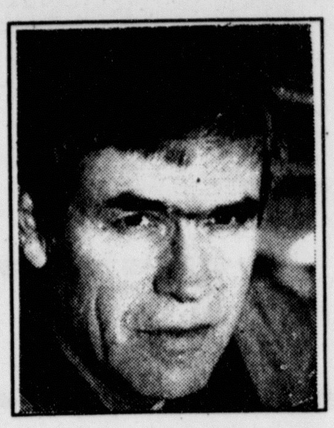
Our two local hospitals, Sutter Davis and Woodland Healthcare, want to make those rates even higher. They are planning to meet the Baby Friendly Hospital guidelines developed by The World Health Organization (WHO) and UNICEF. When hospitals meet the guidelines, they can be designated as Baby Friendly Hospitals.

'Baby-Friendly Hospitals' must implement a breastfeeding policy, allow mothers and babies to stay together, educate patients about the benefits of breastfeeding and refer new mothers to breastfeeding support groups – among other requirements.

"We are delighted that both of our local hospitals are working towards Baby Friendly Hospital status," states Dr. Bette Hinton, Yolo County Health Officer/ Director.

I take it back: birthday parties still fun at age 59

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

As you may recall, a few weeks ago I wrote a column entitled, "Another dreaded birthday is already here" in which I bemoaned the fact that not only am I getting ancient, but that birthday parties just don't seem to be as much fun as they once were. More specifically, I wrote:

"I found myself thinking back to when birthdays (and especially birthday parties) really were fun. Back when my mother would bake up a huge chocolate cake, fill the freezer with homemade ice cream, and then invite my neighborhood friends over to the house where we would play all kinds of fun games until it was finally time for the best part of the whole day - - opening my birthday presents! And what presents they were, too! No socks or underwear or ties or books like you get when you're all grown up, but truly wonderful gifts, like brightly painted toy cars and trucks, and model airplanes that took forever to put together, and big packets of baseball trading cards which just might have my favorite player (Willie McCovey) in them, and cap guns that sounded and smelled so good after you pulled the trigger."

Anyway, like with most everything I pen in this space, I soon forgot I had even written it - - which brings me to my little story.

Every year, when my birthday rolls around, my beloved family has a little party for me. All four of my kids come over to the house, my wife orders me my favorite meal from Club Pheasant (oven-fried chicken), I blow out a few candles on a cake, and then open up a couple of presents (usually books). And this year everything was going along more or less as usual until it came time for me to open up my packages.

Suddenly, in front of me, were placed quite a few more presents than the normal two or three I usually get.

"What's this all about?" I asked my daughter, who seemed to be smiling quite suspiciously.

"Just open them," she threatened, "or we'll start singing happy birthday to you!"

And so I did. And much to my amazement, the first one turned out to be a bright red Tonka Lights and Sounds Fire Engine, complete with a rotating extension ladder, opening utility door, and flashing backup lights. And while everyone else in the room was laughing, I was still trying to figure out why in the world I had just been given a toy fire engine for my birthday. And although it took me another couple of minutes before the answer dawned on me, I finally managed to say, "You mean you guys actually read that column I wrote a few weeks ago about birthday parties being less fun as people get older?"

"Every word," my youngest son assured me.

Anyway, with my one-year old grandson sitting next to me (he was of course absolutely thrilled with my first birthday present), I began to open the others. Next was a 1965 Dodge Coronet 500 snap-together model car kit with authentic paint colors that had a complete chrome body trim package and an accurately detailed engine and interior. Then came a complete set of Old Wild West miniatures, much like the ones I used to have cowboy and Indian wars with out in my parent's backyard garden when I was young. And that was followed by more packages of baseball trading cards than I could shake a stick at! And not only were the modern day baseball stars more than adequately represented (Vladimir Guerrero, Jeff Kent, Alex Rodriquez, Roger Clemens, Randy Johnson, and Barry Bonds, just to mention a few), but there was also a vintage card of Mickey Mantle, swinging his powerful bat from the left side and looking just like he did when his "Damn Yankees" were always beating up all the other teams in baseball. Best of all, though, was the 8-pack of Topps Heritage baseball cards I opened last, and not because there were any particularly well-known players in it, but because it was the only package that had a piece of chewing gum inside, and in my youth, the chewing gum was one of the major reasons I was willing to invest five cents of my hard-earned allowance on a package of baseball cards in the first place.

After I had finally opened up all my presents and thanked everyone for going to so much trouble to make my birthday so memorable, I still couldn't get over the fact that my kids were apparently still reading my newspaper column after all these years.

"But I can't even get you to subscribe to the News-Ledger," I reminded my oldest son, who is married now and has his own home out in Southport.

"That's because you always bring a few copies of it home with you every week and I can just come over to your house and read the darn thing for free any old time I want," he explained. "Plus I figure even if I don't read your column for a month or two, I'll still be able to read all the ones I've missed somewhere down the line."

"And just how are you planning on doing that?" I asked him with interest.

"Well," he explained, "at the rate you keep having birthdays, I figure it won't be too long before all your columns start showing up on the 'Page From The Past'."

Pro gardeners: trade up to quieter, cleaner leaf blower

From Kathy Coulter
Yolo-Solano Air Quality Management District

The Yolo-Solano Air Quality Management District is sponsoring an incentive program to exchange polluting backpack leaf blowers with a new, low-polluting, low-noise model.

"The new blowers are nearly five times cleaner than the California Air Resources Board's (ARB) most stringent standard for other blowers on the market," according to Mat Ehrhardt, executive director. "We are encouraging businesses and agencies to take advantage of this incentive so that we reduce emission levels using the cleanest technology currently available," added Ehrhardt.

The program is open to professional gardeners and landscapers who work in the air district's jurisdiction and to businesses and agencies who are located in the areas

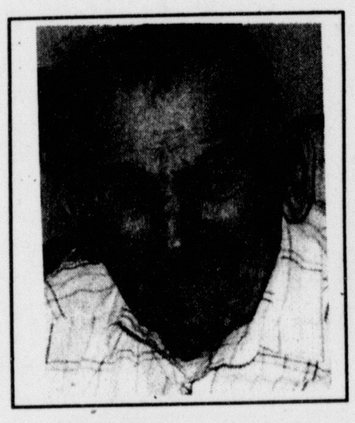
Obituaries

Woodrow Wilson "Woody" Ekenberg

Woody Ekenberg was born on October 5, 1916 on a farm near Byron, CA and was the youngest of 12 children, all of whom preceded him in death. As a teenager he barely survived a serious fall that left him physically disabled for several years. He eventually became frustrated with his medical confinement and ran away to tour much of the U.S. as a "knight of the road", an experience which helped hone a lasting independent spirit.

Woody joined the Army in 1941 and was assigned to an Army Air Force construction unit based out of Sacramento's Mather Field. Immediately after the Pearl Harbor attack his unit was assigned to guard railroad tunnels, snow sheds and bridges in the Sierra Nevada Mountains. He also served in the Aleutian Islands and helped build world class air bases in Alaska, then went on to serve in the Pacific island-hopping campaign and ended his active service in Okinawa in 1945.



Woody was a 47-year member of the Carpenter's Union and worked on numerous construction projects throughout California. He also built the Southport Deli-Mart (Shirley's Deli) in West Sacramento and leased out that popular business for nearly 25 years.

Woody passed away peacefully at his home in West Sacramento on August 24, 2006. He was previously married to Virginia Covington of Bakersfield, who passed away in 1967. He was married to Lena Ekenberg for over 35-years; she passed away in 2003.

Woody did not have any of his own children but was very popular with his numerous nieces and nephews. He and his nephew, Max Ekenberg, of Vancouver, WA have enjoyed a close relationship for many years. Woody is also survived by Lena's daughter, Ayma Kestenbaum of West Sacramento, stepson Cecil Moon of Sasakwa, OK and their children and grandchildren.

Woody's ashes will be spread at sea per his wishes and friends and family will gather to celebrate his life. Extreme gratitude is conveyed to the caregivers who watched over Woody and Lena for the past several years. Anyone wishing to make donations in Woody's memory is encouraged to do so to the Yolo Hospice, PO Box 1014, Davis, CA 95617.

The NFL will kickoff their regular season on Thursday, September 7th in Pittsburgh with the Miami Dolphins playing the defending champion Steelers but the big story dominating the news again is the Terrell Owens show.

The T.O. show has now moved to Dallas and the media is having a field day publicizing Mr. Owens' new drama series. T.O. has now missed 20 practices and skipped a rehabilitation session for his injured hamstring but the straw that broke the coaches' backs was his tardiness to a team meeting.

Owens send word to Parcells that he overslept which promoted owner Jerry Jones to fine Mr. Owens $9,500. The Cowboys swear there is no rift between Parcells and T.O. and that Owens will be ready for action for their season opener in Jacksonville on Sept 10th.

This is just like Déjà vu! I finished the 2006 NFL season trashing Mr. Owens and his drama show and now I get to pick up where I left off to kickoff the 2007 season. Don't you just love this game!

By the way, don't forget to look for Aztecs Picks next week. Aztec provides our readers, strictly for entertainment, three weekly (against the spread) NFL picks, including the Monday night game and the college lock of the week.

Remember my boxer dog (Aztec) finished the NFL playoff season with a very impressive winning percentage that included at 10-1 record in the playoffs, which included picking the Steelers to win the whole enchilada.

Diamond Notes

The Giants (65-66) are starting to make their move to qualify for the playoffs. The G-Men are 4 games back of the division leading Dodgers but their recent winning streak has put them into the wild card picture. The wild card race in the National League is heating up with only 2 games separating the Reds, Padres, Phillies, Giants, and Marlins.

The A's (75-56) are still comfortable in first place in the AL West with a 6 ½ games lead over the Angles and 8 ½ games on the third place Rangers. The Giants will travel back east to this week to Atlanta, Chicago and Cincinnati while the A's camp out at home against Boston, Baltimore and Texas.

As the River Cats season comes to a close the Pacific Coast League has announced its 2006 All-PCL Team, featuring the League's best players at every position and Sacramento River Cats third baseman Scott McClain, who has 25 home runs and 102 RBI's was the lone Gato player selected.

NFL Notes

The Oakland Raiders (4-0) will head into their last preseason game with an unblemished record after whipping up on the Detroit Lions last Friday night in Oakland. The Raiders will fly up north on Thursday night (7 p.m.) to close out the preseason against the Seahawks.

The Raiders surprised everyone on Monday with the signing of 38 year-old quarterback, Jeff George, who quarterback with the Silver and Black from 1997 to 1998. The Raiders finished that season with 4 wins and 12 losses.

During his NFL career George has thrown for 27,602 yards and 154 touchdowns, with 113 interceptions but he hasn't played since 2001. With the final players cut deadline coming up next Tuesday it looks like the Raiders will be carrying 4 quarterbacks on their 53-player roster. Another example of owner Al Davis at his finest!

The Niners on the other hand limped back to San Francisco after taking a good whipping last Saturday night in Dallas. No major injures for the 49ers but the Niners showed no defense and the offense wasn't much better. The 49ers defense gave up 301 yards and 17 points in the first half of their loss to the Boys.

The 49ers (1-2) close out their preseason at home on Friday night (7 p.m.) against San Diego while the Raiders fly up north on Thursday night (7 p.m.) to close out the preseason against the Seahawks.

King Korner

The Sacramento Monarchs are set to defend their WNBA title this Wednesday (4:30 p.m.) night in Detroit. The Monarchs knocked off the Los Angeles Sparks last Saturday night with a 72-58 win at the Arrowhead Pond in Disneyland to earn another shot at the WNBA title. The Monarchs will play two games in Detroit against the Shock then return to the friendly confines of the Arco Arena for game three on Sunday (1:30 p.m.) and game four on Wednesday, September 6th (6 p.m.), if necessary.

Between the Ropes

The "Golden Bear" Amateur boxing event last Sunday night at the California State Fair was a knockout and has been invited by Cal Expo officials to return to the State Fair in 2007. The young boxers entertained an estimated primetime crowd of 2,500 boxing fans under the lights of the Golden 1 stage

The main event co-featured USA boxing No. 2 ranked lightweight, Stan Martyniouk, who won the "Otis Grimble" award" for the best bout of the night, and No. 2 light heavyweight Brandon Gonzales, won the "Don Conley" award" for the best male boxer.

Also, two-time California golden glove winner, Ava Knight, won the "Pop Wilson" award for the best female boxer and Jose Medina was honored with the "Sid Tenner" sportsmanship award.

Enjoy your day- see ya next week!

We take care of everything when you can't think about anything.
We know what it's like not to be able to focus when a loved one dies. We know how hard it is to function. Especially when there's so much to do, so many decisions to make. If there's any comfort to be found, it's in knowing that every detail that needs to be taken care of will be. We know it's never easy, but we'll make it as easy as possible.

In these times of questionable home values, what is the true value of a home? In this region alone there are well over 100 current homes for sale in pretty much every sales price, so putting a value on ones homes makes it difficult for agents. What was the normal thing to do is premises your homes value based on comparable "SALES" in your neighborhood and price your home accordingly. However with a limited supply of buyers, what is it that will set your home apart from the many homes for sale with basically all the same amenities and asking price as yours? Your agent may ask you to continue lowering the prices to stay behind the most current listings. However this tactic has proven to make for bad relationships between you and your agent. How long to have your home listed is another question?
I have always touted that a well priced home will always sell no matter what kind of market you are in! But what is that price, you ask? As a seller you become a buyer (hopefully), and what will tickle your fancy when you are out there looking for homes to purchase? Location: maybe, price: probably, schools: yes, affordability: probably...Are you waiting for the price to come down on the house you want to purchase? And if so, how low do you want it to go before you make an offer? Well the same thing goes for those people who are looking to purchase your home. Make your home stand out by offering to help those people purchase your home, not the agent; negotiated commissions to help your bottom line, know your competition and don't let ego get in the way. Price to SELL. Sit down with your agent and go over a plan and stick to it. Since Price right now is the hot topic, then price to sell....
If you have questions regarding what your home is worth or how it can sell potentially quicker, feel free to call me anytime and we will go over all your options. -- David Trussell

Where did you get your values?

"If you were to ask me what kind of person I am, and what values I have, I would say that I'm a Christian and I believe every person is a gift from God. I treat every person with dignity and respect. As a principal, I have a diverse school, and respect people of different faiths and value them."

Now here's a tip!
by Jo Ann Derson

• An easy way to store wrapping paper for quick use is on a curtain rod. Mount a small one (or several, for different styles of paper) inside the door of a closet or on a garage wall. Slip on the roll and mount. Now it's ready for use anytime, and it's easy to get just the amount you need. You can store rolled ribbon right alongside it if the curtain rod is long enough.

• "You can use eyeglass cleaner or a windshield cleaner with a built-in defogger on bathroom mirrors. It helps if you have a husband who likes a steamy shower, then shaves right after. I was so tired of those hand smears on the mirror, and now I don't have to deal with them." — Y.L. in Arkansas

• Store dairy foods that come in tubs — yogurt, sour cream, cottage cheese — upside down in the refrigerator to make them last longer.

• Mix 1 part dish soap to 2 parts water and keep the mixture in a spray bottle by your sink. Use it to spray heavily soiled dishes for a soak, or to soap up your sponge.

• "If your kids own a video-game console, then you might be aware that after hour upon hour of playing, the console can overheat and shut itself off. I devised an easy way to keep the machine cooler, and therefore less susceptible to costly damage from overheating. I placed a cooling rack (the kind used to cool cookies and other pastries after cooking) on a hard surface (like a shelf in the entertainment center or the top of the TV) and put the console on top. This allows for ventilation of every surface of the game system. Also, make sure your kids don't keep anything on top of the console or too close to the sides, as that will hinder air flow as well." — C.E. in Florida

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

Look what's popping up next

You've probably seen the little sea of new construction near Raley Field, as the "Ironworks" housing project takes shape. Look for it to resemble its sister development, Metro Place at Washington Square – the colorful townhouse development near the I Street Bridge.

You've probably read about the plans for new high-rise projects in the city's Washington neighborhood, near the ziggurat building and the Tower Bridge.

You've probably also read about plans to build dense urban stuff in the Triangle area, just north of the freeway and near the Sacramento River.

And you've watched Southport become home to thousands of new residents.

Mayor Cabaldon pointed out last week that there may soon be a new area to watch, and it may not be a part of West Sacramento you were expecting to see change anytime soon.

This "new kid on the block" is the South River Road area between the freeway and the barge canal. The city's plans call for the road to be expanded and for the riverfront industrial uses and petroleum storage facilities ("tank farms") to give way to more mixed-use, urban-style stuff. Think restaurants, offices, retail and housing overlooking the river. Plans also call for this dead-end street to cross the barge canal via a new bridge, and hook up to the Gateway area.

A confluence of several things may allow the South River Road corridor to redevelop sooner rather than later.

One of those things is the city's planned removal of the rail lines that crisscross the area near the freeway, presenting obstacles to development in the Triangle area (north of the freeway) and in connecting areas. Any time you have an active rail line, you have a major problem with how to safely, legally and cheaply put a road across it. The recent agreement to remove a cement plant and its rail stub from the area helped push that plan along.

Another of those things is the imminent demise of West Sacramento's sewage treatment plan, which is located on South River Road just north of the barge canal. When West Sacramento accepted a deal from Sacramento County in which Sacramento could run a major sewage line through West Sacramento, and West Sacramento could hook up to that line for sewage treatment, the deal numbered the days in which West Sacramento would need its own plant.

And then there is the agreement, still awaiting approval, to relocate the tank farms from both the South River Road corridor and the Sacramento riverfront in order to make way for redevelopment on both sides of the Sacramento River. Sacramento officials hoped for the deal when they turned over control of the local Port of Sacramento, and they are now close to having that dream come true. The Sacramento City Council last week declared their side of the river south of the freeway as a "revitalization area," endorsing relocation of their tank farms to West Sacramento. And West Sacramento feels like a winner in the deal because the relocated tanks would lease land from the port, on Industrial Boulevard – away from city homes – and this would free up this side of the riverbank as well for "higher" uses.

If you need any further proof that the housing market has cooled, just look at some of the incentives that homebuilders are now offering to buyers. Among the sales incentives, the News-Ledger is told, is the choice of stuff like a free Mercedes or six months of mortgage payments from one Southport homebuilder, or an offered 2.5 percent interest mortgage from a north-area developer.

Letters to the Editor

Thank you

I would like to take a moment to publicly thank everyone who has been so kind and thoughtful to me and my family these past few weeks since the death of my husband, Bob Lukins. I would especially like to thank all those who sent us their prayers, and wonderful cards, and beautiful flowers, and delicious food, and made generous donations in Bob's memory.

My children and I have been overwhelmed by all the love and support we have received and I just want everyone to know it has been truly appreciated. Once again, my sincere thanks to each and everyone of you.

Beers breaks vow

"It depends on what the meaning of the word 'is' is." Does that sound familiar? How does this sound: "It depends on what the meaning of 'vow' is."

I was very disappointed to read in the News-Ledger that Wes Beers, who strenuously vowed not to use his appointment to the city council in 2004 as a leg up in a council race at the end of his term, is now flipping like a nervous trout saying he will now run for the city council. In fact, his vow was the reason he was chosen to fill the council vacancy created when our mayor was elected directly that year, over a number of other just as qualified people. For him to now say what he really meant was that he vowed not to run...unless there was an open seat...is nonsense and is disrespectful to us. I suppose if he told the truth then he wouldn't have been appointed.

I for one am really tired of politicians who (NAPS)—Good news for homebuyers. The previously expanding mortgage-lending industry is undergoing a contraction. In fact, the Mortgage Bankers Association predicts the industry will shrink by 14 percent in 2006. That means lenders have to offer more discounts and incentives to win your business and you can take advantage. For more information, visit www.bankofamerica.com.

"World Trade Center"

Running time: 129 minutes
MPAA rating: PG-13

Oliver Stone's "World Trade Center," the story of two policemen trapped beneath 20 feet of rubble at Ground Zero on Sept. 11, 2001, is a mixed offering — some of it good, some bad, some ugly.

Let's start with the good: The performances. Nicholas Cage and Michael Pena play the two Port Authority cops trapped beneath the rubble. Both actors deserve Oscar nominations for their riveting performances — especially Cage, who delivers the performance of his career.

It's too bad their performances were in the service of such an uneven and frustrating film. Where the film has the greatest impact is in the scenes underground with Cage and Pena. Even though we know the guys are going to survive, we find ourselves suffering and struggling with them. But in most of the scenes away from Ground Zero, "World Trade Center" feels like an overwrought Lifetime made-for-TV movie. I'm surprised Stone didn't give Meredith Baxter-Birney a cameo.

And if the bathos of the scenes featuring the wives weren't bad enough, the ugly part of the film is where Stone essentially toes the Republican Party "Lie" by suggesting a link between Iraq and 9/11. He does this by making the movie's shining hero a deranged ex-Marine (Michael Shannon).

Shannon's character watches the towers collapse on TV, declares the country at war, leaves his day job, has his head shaved, dons his old uniform and heads for Ground Zero to save the day. In the end credits, the character is singled out for further recognition when a title card mentions his re-enlistment and two tours of duty in Iraq. This from the director of "JFK"?

"World Trade Center" would've been a great film had Stone shortened the picture to 90 minutes and focused entirely on the two men buried in the rubble. There was more drama and tension in the faces of those two men than any of the manipulative, formulaic storytelling in the scenes away from them.

The survivors and victims deserved a better movie.

Why Most Things Fail: Evolution, Extinction & Economics
by Paul Ormerod
(Pantheon, $24.95)
Reviewed by Larry Cox

Paul Ormerod is the former head of the Economic Assessment Unit at The Economist Newspaper Group. Inspired by recent economic twists and kinks, he set out to examine both the causes and consequences of marketplace fluctuations and ended up debunking many of the economic theories that are rooted in the 19th century.

In his new book, Ormerod claims that instead of the world economy ticking in a predictable fashion like a Swiss watch, governments and corporations behave much like living organisms. Put more succinctly, either they evolve or they die.

The London-based economist, author of the groundbreaking book "Butterfly Economics," is convinced that in order to understand success, we must first understand the pervasive existence of failure. He points out that failure is everywhere, across place, and across different aspects of life.

He points out that 99 percent of all biological species that have ever existed are now extinct, although failure in this context is measured over millions of years. On a shorter scale, more than 10 percent of all companies in America disappear annually. Large and small, from corporate giants to the tiniest one-person business, they fail because each and every one failed to roll with the punches and adapt to the changing marketplace.

Ormerod makes it clear that survival is possible only when individuals, companies and governments adapt in response to the actual behavior and requirements of their customers and constituents.

"Why Most Things Fail" is a truly fascinating book, and especially interesting in light of this autumn's national elections.

Q. I just read about another reality-TV marriage breaking up: Travis Barker (Blink-182) and Shanna Moakler (model/actress) of "Meet the Barkers." First it was Nick Lachey and Jessica Simpson, then Carmen Electra and Dave Navarro. Do you think that being on TV was the poison that corroded these marriages? — A Reader, via e-mail

A. While no one can know for sure if it was the show, the fame, the touring schedules or just incompatibility that made these marriages fizzle out, the pressure of being in the spotlight sure doesn't help. Sharon and Ozzy Osbourne aside, it seems that the celebrity marriages that seem to last are the low-key, out-of-the-spotlight ones. Take Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward, or John Travolta and Kelly Preston, or Tom Hanks and Rita Wilson — they'll show up for a movie premiere or a really special charitable cause, but they keep their private lives where they should be: private. Today's younger stars should take note and follow their elders' example.

Q. Since her Oscar-winning performance in "Million Dollar Baby," I've seen neither hide nor hair from Hilary Swank (aside from hearing about her marriage troubles). Please tell me that my favorite actress has some new movies coming out soon. — Gennifer, Rockledge, Fla.

A. Swank took a two-year break after "Baby," but that doesn't mean she has slowed down her movie production. At last count, Swank had five movies in the pipeline, including "The Black Dahlia," "The Reaping" and "Labyrinth." Prepare for a different Hilary Swank in "The Black Dahlia," as the early buzz is saying that this is her most different and daring role to date.

A. Good question. It seems that each week various magazines are reporting either their break-up or their impending nuptials. The latest gossip is that they are engaged, with Vince even getting some question-popping advice from Courteney Cox. But, as always, take this report with a grain of salt. Personally, I won't believe it until I see the super-secret wedding photos or hear it straight from one of the horse's mouths (or mouthpieces). But I do have a lovely serving platter on hold from Crate and Barrel, just in case.

Q. I Was wondering whatever happened to Mia Sara of "Ferris Bueller's Day Off" fame. I did see her in another movie with Jean Claude Van Damme called "Timecop." What is she doing these days? — Bill, via e-mail

A. After "Bueller," Sara, 39, was in quite a few movies, many of them TV movies such as "Queenie," "Till We Meet Again" and "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea." She's also done guest spots on "CSI" and "Birds of Prey." Most recently she was featured in the television miniseries "Nightmares and Dreamscapes: From the Stories of Stephen King." On a side note: Can you believe "Ferris Bueller's Day Off" was released 20 years ago?!

Jill Jackson's HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD ... Anybody who ever saw it won't forget Jack Nicholson's portrayal of The Joker in the 1989 version of "Batman." Now there's a sequel in the making to be titled "The Dark Knight," and Batman will again face off with The Joker. This time Heath Ledger will take on the role, with shooting to start sometime soon. ... You no doubt know Ledger was born in Perth, Australia, real name Heathcliff after the character in "Wuthering Heights." He stands 6-foot-1. And, did you know he turned down the role of Spider-Man that subsequently went to Tobey Maguire? And there's more. ... Ledger recently purchased a home in the Hollywood Hills for $2.3 million. It's called "The Treehouse" because it's in a grove of sycamores. Ledger shares his digs with actress Michelle Williams and their infant daughter, Matilda. They also own an apartment in New York.

Liv Tyler's next is "Strangers," a suspense thriller about a couple living in a remote home in the suburbs who are targeted by three masked strangers. That's all that's being given out about the plot. Liv is the daughter of Aerosmith lead singer Steven Tyler. Interestingly, they both wear the same size and often go shopping together for outfits. Her mother is Bebe Buell, a '70s Playboy playmate. So why shouldn't Liv be a bundle of beauty and talent?

At the moment, Maggie Gyllenhaal is receiving rave reviews for her performance in "World Trade Center." Oh, how I wish she would change her name to something simple. Everytime I write about her I have to look it up to be sure how to spell G-y-l-l-e-n-h-a-a-l. Maggie is a busy, busy actress. You'll be seeing her this month in "Trust the Man," with Julianne Moore and Billy Crudup. In November she stars in "Stranger Than Fiction" with Will Ferrell and Dustin Hoffman, and later "Sherrybaby" hits the theaters.

It's always nice to see old timers meet and greet. Brenda Vaccaro and Dyan Cannon hugged and kissed like long lost lovers at the "Boynton Beach Club" screening, ditto for Carol Burnett and Gena Rowlands at the Santa Barbara Film Festival. BUT you can bet your last dollar no one ran to hug and kiss Anna Wintour, the editor of Vogue magazine on which the character played by Meryl Streep in "The Devil Wore Prada" is based. The lady showed for a screening of Woody Allen's "Scoop."

Aside to Karen C. of Encino, Calif. Yup. Nic Cage, now on-screen in "World Trade Center," owns a lovely home in the Garden District of New Orleans. Thank heaven that beautiful old section of the city was not too badly damaged by Hurricane Katrina, and that things are getting back to normal. Mr. and Mrs. Nic spend their free time there. P.S. He also gave a million dollars to hurricane relief.

BITS 'N' PIECES: Yup, Britney spotted recently — her hair a dark black, and by the time you read this she may have had that baby. For my money, she is about as fit to be a mother as my 3-year-old niece. ... Leonardo DiCaprio is doing the Sunset Strip nightclubs solo. His hair is back to its natural light brown. ... Sam Elliott is not only one of the best actors in the business, he's one of the nicest. ... George Clooney's latest is the formation of a TV and film company titled Smokehouse. Gorgeous George will write, produce, direct and act for the organization. ... And to Jake R. of Destin, Fla. As far as I know George has not replaced Max, his now defunct pot-bellied pig.

Strange BUT TRUE

• If you're like the average American adult, you sleep for 6.85 hours every night — or day, if you work the third shift. That's nearly seven hours, which doesn't seem too bad, does it? Well, consider this: 80 years ago adults slept an average of 8.77 hours.

• Aldous Huxley, celebrated author of "Brave New World," once defined an intellectual as "a person who has discovered something more interesting than sex." Makes you wonder how many intellectuals agree with that estimation.

• You've probably seen the game show "The Price Is Right" at some point in your life — it seems like it's been on television forever. Reruns of old shows are aired from time to time, but you won't see any of the very earliest episodes on TV. The host, Bob Barker, won't let them be shown — he now objects to the use of fur coats as prizes way back before the animal rights movement had the recognition it has today.

• The directors and producers of "The Twilight Zone" originally wanted Orson Welles to be the host.

• It was 1920 when women were granted the right to vote, but that wasn't anywhere near the end of the battle for equality. For instance, it wasn't until 1983 that the Supreme Court ruled retirement plans can't pay women less than they pay men.

• In 1889, German composer Richard Strauss wrote a piece called "Death and Transfiguration," which he described as a musical depiction of an artist on his deathbed. Sixty years later, as he was dying from an illness, Strauss turned to his daughter-in-law and said, "Funny thing, Alice. Dying is just the way I composed it in 'Death and Transfiguration.'"

Fave Foods OF THE FAMOUS

The Wiggles

The Wiggles began their journey toward becoming the world's No. 1 preschool band more than 15 years ago in Australia. Since then they've sold millions of CDs, DVDs, books and other merchandise, and Murray Cook (Red Wiggle), Greg Page (Yellow Wiggle), Anthony Field (Blue Wiggle) and Jeff Fatt (Purple Wiggle) recently wrapped up another U.S. tour, bringing their favorite characters and adventures along for both kids and adults to enjoy. When it comes to wholesome entertainment, The Wiggles and their friends Captain Feathersword, Dorothy the Dinosaur, Wags the Dog and Henry the Octopus are at the top of the list.

Watch for Dorothy the Dinosaur's Dance Party USA this fall in a city near you. For more information, go to www.thewiggles.com.

Anthony Field, the "Blue Wiggle" responds for the group:

Favorite song about food?

"'Fruit Salad.' We write songs that are relevant to children, and eating is such a big part of a child's day. We like to encourage healthy eating, and fruit salad is one of my favorite things to eat."

Who is the group's best cook?

"None of us are great cooks, but having been on the road for many years we've developed some skills. Jeff is quite experimental. And myself being Australian and married to a Greek background, I can do a great BBQ with lamb."

Name a food or dish one member absolutely loves and another would never eat.

"Greg has very straightforward tastes. We've been to many Greek restaurants that serve goat's meat, and he has never wanted to try it."

Everyone choose a fave food that matches your shirt color.

"Anthony: Blueberries with dessert; Murray: Spaghetti with red sauce; Jeff:' Grilled eggplant; Greg: Bananas."

Any food items you take on tour?

"Uniquely Australian items to remind us of home. We definitely take Vegemite."

WASHINGTON IMPROVEMENT CLUB WILL PROTEST AGAINST WITHDRAWAL OF CAR SERVICE

RENEWED EFFORT WILL BE MADE TO SECURE SUPPLY OF GAS FOR DOMESTIC PURPOSES WITHIN THE TOWN

At a largely attended meeting of the Washington Improvement Club last Wednesday evening, the Secretary of the organization was instructed to write to the Railroad Commission protesting against the withdrawal of street car service from Sacramento to West Sacramento.

The residents of Washington believe that the withdrawal of this service would be injurious to the town and would be injurious to all property owners in the vicinity of West Sacramento.

The service was established several years ago when it was estimated that West Sacramento City would become a populous place, but through financial reverses the promotion of the project was delayed and therefore the street car service was an unprofitable venture.

Lately the Sacramento Northern Railway made request on the Railroad Commission to discontinue the service and it is on that account that the Washington Improvement Club protested against the withdrawal.

With the many activities in West Sacramento the residents of Washington believe the street car service will become profitable in a short time and they voluntarily offer their best assistance in making the service a profitable one for the time being.

The residents of Washington consider that this time is inauspicious to withdraw the service because the Virden Packing Company is about to establish its plant in West Sacramento and the service will be badly needed following that improvement.

With the advent of the packing company and the several great industries now located in West Sacramento, there seems no doubt that the street car service will become profitable within a short time.

Several months ago an offer was made by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company to extend its gas mains across the river provided sufficient support could be secured for the proposition.

A committee of ladies of the club was named to canvas the residents of the town in order to show to the corporation that sufficient support would be at hand.

Unfortunately during the summer season those ladies were so busy that the effort lagged and was revived last Tuesday evening to be promoted strenuously right away.

It is estimated that with a supply of gas for domestic purposes much better rentals can be secured by property owners in the town and more people will be willing to move to Washington from the outlying districts of Sacramento. Residents of Sacramento all use gas during the summer season for cooking purposes and if inclined to move to Washington, hesitate about disposing of their gas stoves and further object to using gasoline or wood for cooking purposes during the summer season.

The ladies of the committee were asked last Tuesday evening to start immediately on securing signatures to the petition for a gas supply.

The committee is composed of Mrs. J. McNevin, Mrs. A. M. Cameron, Mrs. Wm. Wilson, Mrs. W. A. Parkinson and Mrs. W. F. Curry.

In relation to the question asked the War Department lately by the club as to the feasibility of filling the town through suction dredger by pumping sand from the bed of the river, the Secretary was in receipt of a reply that did not answer the desired question and was instructed to write again for further information.

This proposal has a great deal of merit and has the support of all the property owners of the town.

It contemplates offering to the War Department the use of streets and sidewalks for the deposit of filling taken from the bed of the river to help navigation purposes.

This would serve two purposes, namely: Disposal of the debris by the Government and the filling of the town to the grade of the Southern Pacific tracks on Ann street.

The Washington Improvement Club sees therein great benefit to the property owners of the town and stands behind the project with all its force.

Regular meetings of the club will be held in the future on the first and third Tuesdays of each month. Every property owner in the town is welcome to attend these meetings and is urged to be present to participate in the discussions that have for their purpose future benefits for every property owner.

At the home of Mrs. O. P. Cook Mr. and Mrs. F. Thorburn have been guests during several days of the past week.

Mrs. A. A. Dassonville has returned from a week-end visit with her sister, Mrs. Leo Brash, at the home of the latter in Oakland.

Cecil Davis was a visitor this week at the home of his cousin, Mrs. F. De Rigo.

J. N. Wilson came up from San Francisco to spend the week-end visiting at the home of his mother, Mrs. William Wilson.

One of the bi-monthly assemblies with a program prepared by the pupils of the school was held last Friday afternoon. The program was in charge of the pupils of the seventh and eighth grades and consisted of the following numbers: "America," school; dance, Cleone Lynch; song, Marie Thomas; instrumental solo, Thelma Brietzke; recitation, Juanita Ellis; song, Ralpha Colclough; recitation, Ruth Rickard; instrumental solo, Helen Dassonville; song, Dolores Valentine; "Star-Spangled Banner," school. The next assembly will be held October 17th, when a play will be given. These assemblies are open to the public and an especial invitation to parents has been extended.

UNAVOIDABLE CRASH BROUGHT DEATH TO YOUNG BOY

Last Saturday evening at 5:30 p. m. Alberto Luigi, the 7-year-old son of Everesto Luigi, lost his life in an auto accident that befell him on Ann street, between 4th and 5th.

At this point the grade of the street is much below the crossing at 4th or 5th, and much below the grade of the S. P. tracks that run on the street.

Alberto and his brother were returning from Sacramento. In play Mario chased him down the S. P. embankment at the foot of which he stumbled and fell.

Just at that moment Miss Gertrude Mast crossed the grade at 4th street on her way to her home in Woodland. There was no time for her to turn aside nor to stop. Quick as thought her car rolled over the prostrate boy, crushing his skull, breaking his leg in two places and injuring him internally.

Miss Mast stopped her car within 30 feet of the body and tried to render all the assistance she could, although she was hysterieal.

Her companions, Hazel Cranston, Helen Summers, Hazel Ulrich, Pearl Dickson and Margaret Horling, helped also. They were returning to Woodland from the football game in Sacramento.

The boy was taken to the emergency hospital in Sacramento and later to the Sisters Hospital, where he died within an hour of the accident.

His funeral was held Tuesday from St. Mary's Church in Sacramento, interment being in St. Joseph's Cemetery.

All the children of his class room in the Washington school accompanied his remains from his home to the end of the S. P. bridge and six of them acted as pall bearers.

Alberto was an estimable little fellow, full of fun, and very bright in school.

A Coroner's jury held in Sacramento by Coroner Skelton exonerated Miss Mast and her companions from any blame for the death of the boy.

FILM COMPANY IS TAKING PICTURES.

During several days of the past week a Los Angeles film company has been taking pictures of streets and river scenes in this vicinity.

Last night a scow was burned near the Yolo by-pass for scenic effect and "Inky". Peek was the hero, rescuing a young lady named Polly from the river.

Several local young men have been engaged with the film company.

Some time ago a fake film company took scenes in Washington or rather pretended to do so. The gang were detectives hunting for women of the underworld.

It is not believed that the company now taking pictures is a fake.

Church Fair held last week to help teh Italian Catholic Church in Sacramento was a great success.
